Enhancing After School Safety and Security

How safe and secure is your school after the final bell rings? There are over 18,000 schools offering sports and after school programs in the United States. Throughout the year, more than 7.5 million students, athletes, and staff participate in these activities and over 300 million individuals attend these events annually. Although Schools are not known for their response capabilities, school personnel are the first to respond when a school-based emergency occurs. Families and communities expect schools to keep their children safe from hazards and threats. What works during traditional school hours cannot be expected to efficiently address the challenges facing interscholastic athletics and after school activities. This course is designed to help prepare school districts in developing and coordinating after school safety and security management programs.
